EPW. LEAGUE INST. OPENS JULY 17TH

The Rev. Chas. H. Draper of Sycamore, Ill., Dean of the Joliet-Dixon District Epworth League Institute of the Methodist church makes the following announcements:

The Methodist youth of the Joliet-Dixon District are uniting in a summer institute which will be held at the New Lenox Camp Grounds, east of Joliet, between July 17 and July 24.

In years past, two such Institutes have been held, one at New Lenox, the other at Franklin Grove. In the interests of unity and efficiency, these summer gatherings were united last year. Over 200 young people were registered, and spent a week in study, recreation and fellowship.

During the mornings of the week, four hours will be devoted to study groups five each hour. The first hour will be given to Bible study. The second hour will be given to an intensive study of The Methodist Church. Such topics as, "Turning Points in Methodist History," "Makers of Methodism" biography, "Cardinals in the Methodist Creed," "Contributions to Christian Hymnody," and "The Church at Work," will be discussed. Owing to the 200th anniversary of Methodism, which has been observed this year, this hour will be timely.

Other study hours will be devoted to Leadership Training in Methods and Personal Enrichment Courses. Some courses are being planned especially for old young people, and some for the juniors.

The director of the Institute will be the Rev. Chas. H. Draper, of Sycamore, who will be assisted by Rev. E. C. Pope of Sandwich and Rev. Wayne Leighty of Manhattan. Noble Rompel of Joliet will manage the Grounds and the restaurant. Mrs. A. A. Bauman will be the Dean of Women.

The expense for this week of inspiration and instruction will be $7, which covers lodging and meals and registration. The cost has been cut to a minimum in order that every young person desiring to attend may do so. Many churches will provide for this expense thru their budgets.

The preacher on July 24th will be Dr. J. W. R. Sumwalt, pastor of the Woodlawn Methodist Church, Chicago.

The program for the two Sundays at 3 p. m. CST, the speaker will be Dr. John Holland famed WLS radio preacher.

On Sunday evening, July 17th, a unique program will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Walcomb, a blending of pictures, music, and poetry, a presentation of "God's Wonderland" the beauties of the Far West and some points nearer home. The general public is invited to these Sunday services.

Marley 4th of July Pageant Was A Big Success

A historical pageant, entitled, "The Passing Years", written by Mrs. Ward Bush of Marley, was presented on an outdoor stage in the Storm Grove at Marley on Fourth of July morning in connection with the 56th annual observance of Independence Day in this time honored grove.

The pageant consisted of three episodes depicting the various stages of the settling of America from the discovery of the new world by Columbus to the coming of the pilgrims. Quite a number of familiar historical scenes were enacted such as the freeing of the slaves by Abraham Lincoln, the coming of the Suffragettes and the winning of equal rights, Carrie Nation and her hatchet with which she waged war on the liquor traffic, the outbreak of the World War and the Armistice and finally the wonders of radio.

The various modes of transportation was interestingly depicted with an old covered wagon, an old time Ford and a new 1938 model automobile.

The famous mid-night ride of Paul Revere warning the colonists of the approach of the Red Coats was enacted in a realistic manner with a real horse and rider.

The musical numbers and songs accompanying the presentation were cleverly and pleasingly interwoven and as a whole the production was a worthy one and merits much credit and commendation. A great deal of credit is due to all participating and to Mrs. Ward Bush who wrote the libretto.

Miss Clara Bush served as the narrator. An amplifying system was used and the voices of the actors and singers could be plainly and audibly heard over the grove.

The New Lenox band played a number of selections and received a hearty applause.

Following the pageant, an old time picnic was enjoyed in the grove and in the afternoon a program was presented with the Rev. Wm. N. Hawley, student minister from the University of Chicago, giving the principal address followed with vocal and instrumental music.

Sarah Ann Hays Former Orland Resident Dies

Sarah Ann Hays, wife of the late Samuel Hays, was born near Orland Park, Illinois, September 14, 1856. She was the youngest daughter of Thomas and Sophia Begley. She grew to womanhood in the vicinity of her birth.

On May 30, 1877, she was united in marriage to Samuel Hays. To this union were born three daughters: Mary, deceased; Elizabeth, and Frances.

In March, 1890, the family moved to their farm, three and one-half miles northwest of Brook, and continued to live there until 1907 when they moved to Brook, Ind.

In 1917 their daughter Mary departed this life, leaving four motherless children. Elizabeth, the oldest, came to live in the home of her grandparents, and shared the home as one of their children. Her home always was open to her grand children and there was a strong love and devotion shown, by her, for each one individually.

Her companion passed away March 18, 1926.

Mrs. Hays became ill five weeks prior to her death. All that medical aid and tender loving care could do, were done for her, but of no avail; and she departed this life Saturday July 2, 1938 at the age of 81 years 9 months, and 18 days.

She leaves to mourn her loss her daughters Elizabeth and Frances and her five grandchildren, Elizabeth, Alice, Samuel, Louise and Mary Catherine, besides nieces, nephews, and countless friends and neighbors.

She was a great family person, loving relatives and greatly appreciating every act of kindness they so willingly did for her.

Twilight and evening bell
And after that the dark
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark
For though from out our born of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far
I hope to see my pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

Mr. Wm. Beagley, nephew of Orland Park, and Mrs. Arthur Beagley and children and Mrs. Howard Beagley also of Orland attended the funeral.

Annual Band Field Day Proves Big Success

Last Saturday morning, the promoters of the second annual Field Day of the 4 bands; Frankfort, Mokena, Tinley Park, and New Lenox, were rather disappointed when the weather appeared very threatening and it was feared an all day rain would set in. But true to their advertising that the field day would be held rain or shine the promoters of the affair went ahead in the afternoon and luckily that they did for the weather cleared up and by evening fair weather prevailed.

A good sized crowd was in attendance both afternoon and evening although the threatening weather did cut down the attendance somewhat.

The balloon ascension and parachute jump afforded the biggest thrill of the evening. The huge gas bag was inflated on the ground and shortly after 7 o'clock was released with the parachute attached to it.

Pat Hathaway the parachute performer and balloonist performed a number of daring stunts hundreds of feet in the air and then cut loose from the balloon. The parachute opened up like a huge umbrella and it gently fell to earth landing near the Wm. Knipple filling station in an oat field.

As the parachute fell a rip cord let loose the gas and the bag fell to earth very quickly landing in the field near the Knipple place. The balance of the evening was given over to games and to a dance. It is reported that the total receipts amounted to approximately $1500. Just what the amount will be for each band has not been announced as yet.

HUNDREDS AT FRANKFORT CHURCH PAGEANT

We often have heard the phrase that the forest is God's temple and this was brought home literally to the many hundreds of persons and children who attended the outing and pageant in the beautiful Geuther woods on route 45 north of Frankfort, Sunday afternoon and evening.

The setting for the pageant presented by the St. Peter's Evangelical Church of Frankfort in which over 200 persons took part, was in a natural amphitheatre of gently rolling hills. The seats were on the hill side and the stage was a gentle swell at the foot of the hillside. Beautiful stately trees cast their shade over the serene quiet woodland.

The day's outing came to a close with the serving of a bountiful supper just as the sun was nearing the evening hours.

The sunset was extremely beautiful and the soft glow of the setting sun illuminated the woodland for quite sometime and then as the shades of night crept on and gradually blotted out the light of day, the moon came out in full glory together with a starry host. Then also the electric lights came on lighting up the amphitheatre and stage.

Fully two thousand persons filled all the seats and every available space while some remained seated in their cars, all anxiously awaiting the opening of the pageant, which for richness of color, historical interest, splendid continuity and the striking message it brought home, was an offering long to be remembered and appreciated.

The opening scene showed Miss America seated on her throne, the back of which was the shield of the United States. Two of her helpers, patriotism and service had quarreled and she called each of them to prove why she alone should be crowned as of supreme importance.

Two trumpeters in full uniform, standing on each side of the throne, blew a fanfare summoning the characters as each episode was announced by Miss America. The characters were attired in the costumes and styles of the various periods of history they strikingly represented by the pilgrims up to the present day. The chief point patriotism wished to bring out was that the great victories of the past and the settling of the country was the chief heritage of our country.

Following this, Service called for a hearing of her issues and the various episodes and characters were summoned and Service then pointed out that the glory of the past was being stained by the indifference and ill treatment we so often accord not only to the foreign strangers who migrate to our shores in search of a haven of refuge, but we also have and are neglecting the educational, personal and spiritual welfare of these people and also our own descendants. The spirit of service then called to her aid the professional men, doctors, nurses, ministers, business men, and in the final analysis the lesson was conveyed that both the spirit of patriotism and service must work hand in hand to keep America great and to keep her in the forefront of the nations of the world. The denouement of the pageant came when bands of red, white and blue encircled all the characters standing on both sides of the throne, symbolizing the band of life and Christian fellowship which eventually encircle all creeds, races and conditions of men in this great nation. The need of a broadening of the religious life and standards was especially stressed.

No other program or play has ever been presented here that made as deep an impression as this impressive pageant did. A great deal of credit belongs to all who so faithfully portrayed their parts and also to Rev. G. S. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical Church of Frankfort, for his outstanding leadership.

This pageant was not only entertaining, but also educational and brought home a great moral truth. An amplifying system carried the voices of the actors and singers to all parts of the grove and made it possible for everyone to hear the entire program without interruption.

Hold Last Rites For Mrs. J. C. Andres

Tinley Park was deeply grieved when the news came Friday morning that Mrs. Julia Andres, wife of J. C. Andres former cashier of the Bremen State bank had passed away in the Ingalls Memorial hospital in Harvey following a valiant fight against the insidious disease which had sapped her strength the past few weeks and which, despite all medical aid, could not be stayed.

Juliana Christine Andres nee Funk was born in Tinley Park November 28, 1878. She was confirmed in the Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park, Palm Sunday, April 10, 1892.

On August 16, 1899 she was united in marriage with John C. Andres, Tinley Park. About twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Andres joined the Tinley Park M. E. church.

Mrs. Andres was a fine christian woman in every sense of the word. She loved her Church and christian fellowship. She was a loving wife and devoted herself to the happiness of her husband. She loved her home with its pretty garden and flowers. Always cheerful, she had a pleasant smile for all and a helping hand for such who were in need.

Some years ago she opened her home to her orphaned niece, Miss Evelyn Swartz and was to her not only an aunt, but a real mother, who found her reward in the filial love which her niece bestowed upon her. How warm and tender this love was, is borne out by the fact that her niece was her constant companion during her illness at the hospital, caring for her every want and whispering words of faith and comfort to her when death drew near.

Apparently quite well, Mrs. Andres suddenly became afflicted early this spring with a malady that wore her vitality down with amazing rapidity. Several weeks ago she was taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital in Harvey in the hope of getting a true diagnosis of her ailment.

Two blood transfusions were made and everything was done within the power of medical skill to restore her to health, but without avail.

She passed away July 1st at 6:20 a. m. At her bedside were her husband, niece and nephew and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Hardinger.

There remain to mourn her departure, her husband, John C. Andres, her aged father, Jacob Funk one brother, William Funk, a niece and nephew, Evelyn and Wesley Swartz and many other close and distant relatives beside a host of friends.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon in the Tinley Park M. E. church with Rev. Chas. Hedler officiating. The edifice was far too small to hold the large concourse of friends who came to pay their last tributes of respect so that the overflow extended out into the street.

The assessed valuation on automobiles in Frankfort township is $15,605; of cattle $20,130, household furniture, $15,965. All three of the above classes are lower but stocks and bonds are higher. At one time bank stocks were assessed at $80 per share while now they are $18.

Two Hurt By Fire Crackers

The Fourth of July claimed two accident victims. John Brophy aged 61 years of New Lenox was shooting firecrackers and evidently held one of the crackers a second too long and it exploded in his left hand and injured it so badly that the thumb and two fingers had to be amputated in Silver Cross hospital.

In Mokena, Arthur Hostert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hostert, picked up a fire cracker which had failed to explode, but as he picked it up, it exploded, injuring three fingers and tearing the flesh. He was rushed to the office of Dr. W. V. Hedges in Frankfort for first aid and was given a serum to prevent danger of lockjaw.

Sarah Lynn pushed Penny away. "I knew what Gunnar thought. He'd told me over and over. I don't want his pity and his duty. I want him to be free. I want him to be free, always, not even to remember me, not even to be sorry any more." She cried again, then, long and terribly and the governess wrung her hands in helpless grief and fright. After a while Sarah Lynn said in a small, tired voice, "You'd better bathe my eyes, Penny, and powder my nose. They'll be coming home soon. And you'd better be reading Duncan's book."

Duncan Van Doren was the first to return. The dentist had given him an unpleasant afternoon and he was pale and fagged looking. He studied Sarah Lynn's face anxiously. "Sarah Lynn, aren't you feeling well? Is anything the matter? Well, then, did you—did you miss me at all?"

"Yes, I missed you a lot, Duncan," she told him gravely. "And I've been thinking a lot, too, Duncan, if I keep on improving, if I'm able to walk again, and not be such a burden, if you still want me—"

"Sarah Lynn!"

"And if you'll take me away to Detroit and keep me there always, and never let me hear planes going by in the sky—"

Hot color flooded his face; he was shaking and stammering. "Oh, Sarah Lynn! I'll take such care of you! I'll make you happy! I'll make you happy—"

"I'll try to make you happy, too, Duncan," she said levelly. "I'll do my best. I promise."

It was in the dawn, chilly and dark, that Miss Pennington in Mrs. Dana's discarded dressing gown went padding across the floor to stand beside Sarah Lynn's bed.

"You're not sleeping."

"No, Penny. It doesn't matter."

"Have you pain? Do you feel the brace too much?"

"No," she said again after a pause. "I don't feel—anything."

The governess went down on her plump knees and groped for Sarah Lynn's hand. "Oh, my dearie, why did you do it? Why? Why did you do it?"

It was a long moment before she spoke. "It makes Mother happier than anything else in the world; it pays Duncan back; it pays them both back."

"Ah, but you, Sarah Lynn! You!"

"It doesn't matter, Penny," she laughed. "It matters not—Remember Uncle Lynn's pipe-rack? The rest of the verse is silly: master of your fate and captain of your soul. That's sentimental nonsense. But it doesn't matter how strait the gate is. Will you give me a drink of water, please, Penny?"

Miss Pennington brought it and stood waiting while she drank. Tears were running down over her bright, hard cheeks and the tip of her nose was red.

"Thank you, Penny dear," Sarah Lynn said clearly, handing back the glass. "And there's one other reason. Gunnar. If ever he hears—and he will hear, sometime, through Uncle Lynn or Conrad Jordan or Sally Ann—he will think everything is all right. You see, Penny, I want him to be free, free always, the way I knew him. I don't want him to have one thought that's remorseful or sorry. I want him to forget all about me, but if I ever do come into his mind I want him to think: 'So! She married the first suitor! She lives the soft life, safe and dull. It is finished.' And I'm going to forget him, too, Penny. I'm going to—"

She broke off with a muffled cry and put her hands over her ears.

Miss Pennington stood listening. There was the throbbing of a motor far above them.

CHAPTER XV

For once Mrs. Edwin Dana defeated the press. The betrothal of her daughter to the son of her dearest friend was kept an absolute secret. Tenderly triumphant letters went from Danavale to Detroit and Detroit to Danavale, but the colony itself had only surmises and the public was in ignorance.

It was to be a rather long engagement—until Sarah Lynn was walking normally—and the wedding would be the simplest and quietest possible. She fed her fancy upon that. There had been enough publicity before to pollute a reticent lifetime. She shaped the notice she herself would send to the papers: "Miss Sarah Lynn Dana, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dana of Danavale, and Mr. Duncan Van Doren of Detroit were quietly married at four o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, the seventh, at the family home on Loma Vista drive, with only the immediate relatives present. Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren sailed the following day for the Orient and after a few months of travel will make their home in Detroit."

The vision of it in type restored the years that the locusts had eaten.

Sarah Lynn traveled to new milestones of progress and left them behind. She could sit up for half the day; she could walk about the room; she could walk about the garden; she could be taken for gentle rides in the family motor-car. On one of the first drives her mother took her to call upon Lynn Dana. His chair was on the lawn in the bright winter sunshine and the elderly chauffeur drove the machine close so that they might talk without Sarah Lynn's leaving the car. Mrs. Dana did most of the chatting. Then they went to see dear Aunt Helena where Duncan met them for tea.

Sally Ann came back but she stayed in San Francisco and came down for a day or two at a time, only.

Lynn Dana had her for luncheon with Mary Dana Webster and Conrad Jordan.

"What do you hear from Gunnar?" the traveling cousin asked the flier once.

"Nothing."

Sally Ann stared.

He shrugged. "He never writes, and I don't. I had a brief and very formal note of thanks after he left."

"Stop, Gunnar! Wait! You don't understand."

"Then—he doesn't know about Sarah Lynn's recovery?"

"Not from me. He clearly wanted to make a clean break. What point would there be in telling him now? She's going to marry Van Doren."

"Besides," Mary Dana Webster said crisply, "to rush back now when she's well, after bolting when it seemed hopeless, wouldn't be very handsome, would it?"

Gunnar Thorwald's only defender was silent.

Sally Ann said: "I'm off to New York in a week or so. I've seen Sarah Lynn, and that's what I came home for. I've seen her four times—and I haven't seen her at all. Duncan was there, or Cousin Adelaide, but even if I'd had her alone I doubt if I could have punctured that—cellophane calm which covers her!"

The aviator said, "Why try?"

"Yes, why?" the man in the wheeled-chair wanted to know. "Good Lord, Sally Ann, if she has achieved peace—if she's happy—"

"Peace?"

"Happy?" The two women scorned him hotly. "She's like a sleep-walker," Mary said. "She's deliberately doped herself with Duncan and Detroit; that's my analysis. She has simply ceased to matter to herself; she simply doesn't count—and she doesn't care—and it's too hideously cruel and I could howl my head off!" She wiped away angry tears.

Jens, the valet, came upstairs at his slow and lumbering tread. Miss Pennington was calling, and it was very, very important, and she must see Mr. Dana immediately.

"Send her up, of course, Jens," Lynn Dana said, but she passed the man-servant in the doorway.

Her cheeks were pale and she was out of breath. "Oh, Mr. Dana, I found him on the drive—coming to the house—I made him come here first—I made him—he doesn't know—"

There was the sound of someone taking the stairs in bounds and suddenly the little old Hank Dana house was full of drama and confusion and alarm and Gunnar Thorwald was among them.

He didn't seem real. He didn't seem to be a living person but a presence which they had conjured up out of their grief and rebellion. He was utterly white and his eyes were bluer by contrast, and he was thin and gaunt. He looked older and he seemed taller, so tall that he towered over them, and his harsh and urgent youth made them seem soft and safe and middle-aged.

But there was a more subtle change in him, they were to decide, discussing it later among themselves; the young cocksureness was gone, the proud arrogance was gone, the fine bones of his face were more insistent through the flesh, chiseled and chastened into strange humility.

He made no amenities of greeting. "I have come for Sarah Lynn," he said simply. "Twelve days I have been coming to her; I can no longer wait." He made a slight gesture toward the governess who had delayed him. "I will take her with me. Or—if the doctors do not allow—I stay beside her until she can go." The small sentences came out roughly, hammered into crude shape on an anvil of strong feeling.

"I should not have gone; she turned from me, she sent me away, but it was the pain, the drug. Now I know, I flew away, but—" he groped for words—"but I did not leave her; always she was with me, land, sea, air, in my work, eating, sleeping. To forget was my wish. It is finished," I said, but it was not finished. So, now, I come again. If she says, 'Never fly,' then I do not fly. I take her or I stay beside her."

He stopped talking and turned toward the door. "Now I go to her." Conrad Jordan was on his feet. "Stop, Gunnar! Wait! You don't understand—"

The tall youth nodded. "I understand. She will shrink from me still?" His face worked. "At first, maybe. No matter. I go to her."

The older flier said desperately, "Gunnar, I must tell you—"

He gave a muffled cry. "She lives!"

"Yes, but she"—he laid a hand on Gunnar's arm but he shook it off, striding toward the door.

It was Mary Dana Webster who blocked his way.

"Gunnar—wait! I've got to tell you—you've got to take it. Sarah Lynn is well again. She's been walking for weeks, now, and she won't even be lame. But—" she cut through his shout of joy—"Gunnar, listen to me! She's going to marry Duncan Van Doren next week."

Gim Jung, the cat-footed Chinese second-boy, came padding up the stairs to tell Mrs. Dana that a lady was calling, and she went down to find Ardine standing in the hall. The serene sunniness of her face clouded over a trifle. Ardine had never come to see Sarah Lynn in all her long imprisonment, although expensive flowers had arrived at the hospital with the card of Mr. and Mrs. Keaton Dana.

Ardine did not even return the thin gracious greeting. "I thought you'd like to know," she said. "Gunnar Thorwald is back." She was out of breath with hurrying, and her hot-looking hands with their crimson nails were trembling.

"Here?"

"Here. I saw him, just now, going into Lynn Dana's house."

Mrs. Dana drew herself up with the ancient gesture of a lady putting an upstart in her place. She was milk-white. "Thank you. I—I appreciate your thoughtfulness, not, of course, that it could make any difference now, but—"

Ardine lifted one full shoulder in a languid shrug. "All right. I just thought you'd like to know." She let herself out of the front door.

Mrs. Dana stood still in her hand-some hall, clenched hands pressed to her jaw-bones for long moments. She went to her own room and rubbed her pale cheeks with a rough towel and pinched them and went back to Sarah Lynn and Duncan, who were playing chess.

"Here?"

He smiled up at her ruefully. "Your daughter is about to check-mate me!"

"Oh, no!" Mrs. Dana said sharply.

"See if I care!" Duncan said ardently. "When I remember that this time next week we'll be 'way out on the Pacific; that's Wednesday, and this is Saturday, today, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday—" he counted off the days on his slender fingers.

"And everything finished and ready now!" Mrs. Dana said with an odd laugh. "You could—you could be married tomorrow—or this evening!"

"That's an idea!" Duncan agreed fondly. "Why not?"

Sarah Lynn said, "Your family won't be here until Monday." She waited for Duncan to move.

"Of course!" her mother said. "We couldn't disappoint them. But if you should want a romantic elopement—Everything's ready, even to the license!"

Duncan deliberated with his knight. "Not our line, is it, Sarah Lynn? Old and settled and sedate—" he moved the piece.

Sarah Lynn's hand hovered over the board, hesitated, came to rest on the table's edge. She spoke in a voice they had not heard for a long time. "Duncan, are you very sure? I mean, are you satisfied?"

"Of course I am," he said quickly. "Your play!"

"I haven't tricked you, have I?" she went on. "You said you'd be content with half a loaf, but sometimes I think it's just a few crumbs, Duncan." She looked at him steadily. Sally Ann would have seen a crack in the cellophane. "Are you sure?"

He gave her hand a pat. "I'm sure you're going to beat me in a minute!"

After a pause Sarah Lynn made her move. "Check!" she said in her usual voice.

Her mother went to her own room and talked agitatedly over the telephone to Aunt Helena. The family seeress was startled but she pulled her serenity over her head like a sweater. Dear Adelaide was to lie down at once without a pillow, and an iced towel over her eyes, and relax, drawing long rhythmic breaths. There was not the slightest cause for alarm. The intruder would hear from Lynn Dana of Sarah Lynn's impending marriage and he would go away again.

CHAPTER XVI

Mrs. Dana's rhythmic breathing was interrupted by three telephone calls. She rose swiftly at each bell before a servant could answer, and said the same things in turn to Mary Dana Webster, Sally Ann, and Lynn Dana.

"No, I will not call her," she stated firmly. "No; I will not give her that message. There is absolutely no point in telling her: it can make no possible difference now in her plans. . . . I tell you it would make no difference—it is simply that I do not wish to have her disturbed and distressed by the revival of painful memories. . . . No. . . . No!"

She went downstairs to find Gim Jung, the cat-footed Chinese second-boy. "Gim Jung, telephone ring, every time, you call me. Company come, say, 'Miss Sarah Lynn,' never mind, you call me!"

"All right," he agreed, incurious almost eyes on her face. "I call."

"Maybe letter come, maybe telegram, Miss Sarah Lynn, never mind, you bring to me!"

"All right," he said again. "I bring."

Giant White Oak Tree in Georgia Now Known as "the Tree That Owns Itself"

A large white oak tree in Athens, Ga., is known as "the tree that owns itself." The ground on which the tree stands was once owned by William H. Jackson, a professor at the University of Georgia. He was born about the close of the Revolutionary war and was the father of James Jackson, who was chief justice of the State Supreme court at the time of his death in 1887. Professor Jackson was so fond of his oak tree, states a writer in the Indianapolis News, that about 1820 he wrote a deed conveying to the tree full possession of itself and the land on which it stands. The original of this so-called deed is not a matter of record and it is not probable that it was ever registered. According to a well established tradition it was to the following effect:

"I, William H. Jackson, of the county of Clarke, state of Georgia, of the one part, and the oak tree (defining the location) of the county of Clarke of the other part: Witness, that for and in consideration of the great love I bear this tree and the great desire to have for its protection for all time, I convey entire possession of itself and of the land within eight feet of it on all sides."

Of course a tree, like other chattels and things, can not legally own property, but Jackson's admiration for the tree led him to adopt this means of preserving it after his death. His sentiment has been respected. However defective the tree's title may be in law, it is recognized by the people of Athens who cherish and protect the tree as if it were "a freeholder" of the city. Soon after the beginning of the Twentieth century a private citizen at his own expense had granite posts connected by chains placed around the Jackson oak for its protection, and a white marble block, inscribed with part of the words of the traditional deed, was erected nearby.

Presidents From Poor Families
Nine Presidents of the United States were born to very poor families. The others were born in varied circumstances, mostly middle class folks. Washington became one of the great landowners of his day. Abraham Lincoln entered the White House almost penniless, but since the Civil war most of our Presidents have been men of moderate means.

CALEB: LIFE-TIME DEVOTION

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 14:6-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.—Numbers 13:30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Caleb.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Caleb the Brave.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Hero's Reward.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage for Difficult Tasks.

"We need to know more about good men who are occasionally great, and less about great men who are occasionally good," says the Lesson Commentary, in pointing out that Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does not say much, but in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:6, 30; 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for today.

The background for our study of today, and in fact an integral part of the lesson itself, is the story of Caleb's courageous stand with Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. He was then a comparatively young man, but demonstrated by his every word and deed that he had from his youth learned to know and obey God.

Note first of all Caleb's

I. Perfect Obedience (vv. 6-9).
"I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. In saying it he was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to such a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need know only one thing—God's will, and then in faith to go and do it. It is a life beautiful in its transparent simplicity and powerful in the strength of God Himself.

II. Promised Inheritance (v. 9).
"Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed, but down through this period of wilderness wanderings and the conflict in subduing Canaan the promise had lived in Caleb's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which lighten up the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill them.

III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10, 11).

"The Lord hath kept me alive . . . and I am . . . strong." Here was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeless sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians," but even apart from that let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with God in holy living may count on Him for the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental, but extremely important, lesson, we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently sinned against Him and against His faithful servants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing to themselves and to the church by encouraging and using them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15).

"If . . . the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God. It is significant that while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15).

The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land in this year of our Lord 1938. Corruption—social and political—raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them. There are giants "within us"—greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Blakie). Are we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Caleb—able. In His name we may take up a slogan of today, "Let's do something about it!" and really do it, for His glory.

A BIT of hand embroidery for the collar and sleeves of a little girl's dress is always the smartest trimming. Quickly made stitches and interesting colors may be combined to give unusual effects.

The dress shown here is pale blue chambray. The collar and sleeves are edged with blanket stitch in a deeper blue as shown at A. Between each blanket stitch a tiny loop stitch is made in white and three larger white loop stitches at the top of every second blanket stitch as shown at B. All six strands of a six strand embroidery cotton may be used or No. 5 pearl cotton. For a dress of fine sheer material such as dimity or organdie use finer embroidery thread.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It is entirely possible that many people have failed to piece together several developments of national importance late in its closing days. The two incidents to which I refer are the federal grand jury indictment at South Bend, Ind., of a number of automobile manufacturing executives and the action of congress in adoption of a resolution providing for a broad-gauge inquiry into big business. The two, when pieced together, spell a sensational drive against the "malefactors of great wealth."

The result? Well, let's examine the scheme, the pattern and the prospects.

There was a period in 1936, it will be recalled, when business interests felt that President Roosevelt was preparing to follow a middle-of-the-road policy as far as government relations with business was concerned. During that period, there was a considerable improvement in general business. In that interim of time, as far as any observers could reach a conclusion, the President was relying on advice from many men in whom business had confidence. But there came a sudden end. Out of the clear sky, Mr. Roosevelt proposed reorganization of the Supreme court of the United States and the addition of six justices whom he could appoint at once. Through weeks of battle when it became apparent that one guess was as good as another whether the President would win, business men and women again became afraid. That was when the present depression began. It was also the time when Mr. Roosevelt turned away from his previous close advisers and began listening to the new brain trust which has come to be known as the "board of strategy."

As the depression became sharper and the numbers of unemployed increased with startling rapidity, the board of strategy sought means to offset the condition. The group also had to find a goat—which is always done when plans go awry. There followed then the vicious and interperate attacks on "big business" by the trust-busting Robert H. Jackson, then favored at the White House as the next Democratic candidate for the New York governorship. Secretary Ickes also let loose his vocabulary and none can deny the interior secretary's capacity for speaking biting words. For weeks and weeks, we were treated to a barrage of words in which "big business" was pictured as beyond the pale of good citizenry and ought to be destroyed.

The trust-busting drive was not as successful in gaining public acclaim as had been hoped for. The truth is that it failed to get the country excited at all and the profit to the trust busters did not materialize as had been the case when "Teddy" Roosevelt was swinging a big stick of demagoguery in the same field of political endeavor. Indeed, this drive flopped at the start whereas the drive by the earlier Roosevelt was good politics for several years.

It was here, according to the best information available, that the tactics changed. The change in methods is the real reason for the story. Thus, it can be said that the trust-busting drive is still going on as strong as ever but it is going on in several fields without any apparent connection because the board of strategy has lost none of its determination to convince the nation that it is being ruined by those same malefactors of great wealth toward which Teddy Roosevelt waved his fist and bared his teeth.

Now, to put the pieces of the picture together. The first section comprises the indictment of the automobile moguls, Edsel Ford, Walter P. Chrysler, Alfred P. Sloan and William Knudsen, among some sixty-odd officials of Ford, Chrysler and General Motors and the companies affiliated with them in the financing of motor cars bought on the installment plan. They are charged with violation of the antitrust laws, although how anybody can believe the Ford interests ever could have played ball with the other two, I have been unable to see. Anyway, big news stories were carried by the press services from South Bend, and the department of justice here had much "background" information which officials were delighted to hand to any inquiring reporter. They did this in order to co-operate with the press inasmuch as the story was so sensational and so vast in scope that none of us writers here could possibly be permitted to miss any phase of it.

The other phase of the continuing drive against "big business" takes the form of a great inquiry, thinly disguised as a general study of business practices. It is a somewhat unusual type of investigation and is to be managed in a very unusual manner. The committee that will do the job is made up of three senators and three representatives, and a representative from each of a number of executive departments and commissions. And the important fact in addition is that the $500,000 which the investigation will cost will be expended under the direction of President Roosevelt.

To bring it own to simple terms, when congress adopted the resolution for the inquiry, the board of strategy was able to turn on enough political steam to force adoption of an amendment placing the funds under the direction of the President, rather than under control of congress, as usually is done when congress participates in an investigation. That action means that investigators for the committee will be able to rely upon laws covering inquiries and searches made by the department of justice, the federal trade commission, the securities and exchange commission and the national labor relations board, among others. The combined powers will be all-comprehensive.

To explain further the full meaning of these broad powers, it is necessary to cite constitutional provisions prohibiting illegal search and seizure. The investigators for the committee must be able to dig deep into private records of any bank or corporation or individual if they are to accomplish fully the desire of the board of strategy for complete exposure of all the secrets of business. When they get all of those records, of course they can analyze them and place their own construction on the business practices. That is today, by inference and innuendo, hint or open charge, the investigators can smear anything or anybody—and the newspapers will spread the information. It being an official investigation, it will be followed closely by the press and, as usual, there will be little chance for the individuals to reply. When they are marked to be smeared, they will be smeared, whether justly or unjustly. It is a deplorable thing that our government stoops to that sort of thing but it has done so in a number of instances.

Now, as to the main objectives. Every indication is that the guiding hands in the projected investigation are determined to destroy two great masses of capital. I mean, they intend to break up the combination of men and money in two instances. The banking house of J. P. Morgan and company, and the huge industrial setup of the DuPonts are marked. Whether they like it or not, those two groups are to be made the goats of the depression of 1937-38, and those on the inside recognize that it is a fight to the finish. There will be other corporations, other individuals, whose business lives will be laid bare, but the Morgans and the DuPonts are the real targets.

The board of strategy believes the Morgan bank and the DuPont interests are chiefly responsible for the refusal of business to yield on many of the crackpot ideas of the professors, and so it is inevitable those two groups will be cast as the villains. There arises, next, the question whether such an investigation and such a prosecution as has been started at South Bend will do the country any good. One ought not prejudice. It may be that the motor magnates and their corporations are guilty as pups. It may be that the Morgans and the DuPonts and scores of others among families with great fortunes have set about to wreck the New Deal. But the question in my mind is: why has it not been discovered before? It seems to me that if there was so much corruption, so much improper influence being exercised and such illegal use of money power as is represented by those who were pushing the investigation, it should have been several years ago. Mr. Roosevelt has been in office five years and it appears strange that there was no effort to uncover these demons until the business of the country as a whole lost confidence in the policies of the national administration.

These developments have come along as the depression grew worse. They reach their climax of preparation at a time when another federal agency, the board of governors of the federal reserve system, says that the industrial depression in the United States now is the worst in the world. Neither England nor any other industrial country abroad has experienced a depression that has been as precipitous as the United States is experiencing, the board said in an official statement.

The power is not given to me to determine the numerous and varied facts, but the processes of deduction eliminate many possible causes for our nation's condition—most of them, indeed, excepting governmental meddling and the harassing of business, big and little.

Siege of Troy Recounted in Homer's Story

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

THE story of "The Iliad" by Homer takes place during the Trojan war and relates the wrath of Achilles, greatest of warriors.

It is now the ninth year of siege when Homer begins his epic and the Greeks are encamped on the shores of Asia Minor, besieging Troy. They are dejected as the poem begins, for their hero will not fight. The mighty Achilles sulks in his tent.

Agamemnon, commander of Greek forces, had demanded a slave girl who had previously been awarded to Achilles as part of the spoils of battle. Thus unjustly treated by his commander, Achilles retired to his tents with his followers and refused to fight.

During the days of this quarrel, conversations among the men relate previous happenings.

Helen, most beautiful woman of history, was wooed by every prince of Greece. To protect the fortunate winner, all these chieftains swore to defend Helen, should the necessity ever arise. She finally chose Menelaus to be her husband. Sometime after this, Paris of Troy, a handsome youth, came to visit at the palace of Menelaus. When he returned, he took Helen back to Troy with him. Thus all Greek chieftains were called upon to fulfill their vows and go to reclaim Helen.

Pretends to Be Mad.

Ulysses, happily married, did not wish to go on such a quest. He pretended madness, and plowed the fields, sowing salt.

When the boats were ready to sail for Troy, the winds stopped. An oracle explained that a maiden of royal birth must be sacrificed. So, Iphigenia, daughter of Agamemnon, was made a human propitiation to the god of winds.

Nine years of encampment then followed with neither side gaining much advantage. Meanwhile within the walls of Troy, Helen's great

TRADITIONAL POET

The Iliad and the Odyssey were recited or performed every four years at Athens during the classical period. Homer is the traditional poet of these two poems; he has no existence apart from his poetry. The facts of his life are traditional or are surmised from his writings.

As far back as the classical period in Greece, Homer was an ancient poet. The classical Greeks made translations of his work, they wrote lives of Homer, they taught his poems and made analyses of his work. The language which he used in the original poems was ancient to the classical Greeks.

beauty had so completely captured the Trojan people that they fought madly to keep her within their city.

Hector Challenges.

Then occurred the incident of the slave girl and Achilles' wrath. Hector, the greatest warrior of Troy, came forth and issued a challenge for individual combat. But no one answered. Achilles was the only man to fight this Trojan warrior, and Achilles would not fight. Then Patroclus, dear friend of Achilles, borrowed the armor of Achilles and went forth to uphold the fair name of Greece.

From his tents Achilles saw his friend die. With a roar he rushed into the battle, but he had no armor. He would recover Patroclus' body for burial. The sound of his voice was enough; the Trojans were back inside the wall.

Achilles must have new armor. His goddess mother came and offered to have a suit forged in the fires of Vulcan.

Achilles Fights Hector

Clad in his new armor, Achilles sought Hector for combat. The mighty warriors were evenly matched. Around they circled, each seeking an opening in the other's guard. Time passed, yet they fought furiously, neither gaining advantage over the other. A goddess favoring Achilles fled down from Olympus and clouded the eyes of Hector, so that Achilles succeeded in smiting him a powerful stroke with his sword. Hector lay in the dust, his plumes and fine clothing despoiled. A wall went up from the tops of the walls of Troy as Achilles fastened things in the heels of Hector and tied him to his chariot, then drove madly round the walls of Troy.

Late at night there came a visitor to the tents of Achilles, it was Priam, aged king of Troy and father of Hector. Weeping, he pleaded for the body of his son, he recounted the glory of Hector and with tears of love he proved that Hector was too noble to be forced to wander forever through the shades for lack of proper burial. Achilles heard his prayer with compassion and gave to him the body of his son.

Explains What Is Meant by

CORRECT NUTRITION

Describes How to Construct a Balanced Diet, So Essential to Maintain Optimal Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system.

Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed

You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of over-indulgence—without meeting bodily requirements.

The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample.

What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet

Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials

There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily. Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance

The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check Diet for Balance

hydrate. Or it may be that while you understand the difference, you do not know what quantities should be included in the diet each day.

To simplify your task of serving balanced menus at every meal, I have prepared a Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance. In convenient chart form, it shows what foods should be included in the diet every day and gives the standard amount for each food. There are also skeleton menus outlined by food classifications, which enable you to plan balanced menus for every meal by making a choice from each group of required foods.

I urge every homemaker to write for this chart and use it daily. Then you won't make such common mistakes as serving a dried legume as a vegetable at a meal in which meat is used, which tends to concentrate too much protein in one meal; or choosing a too-heavy dessert following a main course that is overly rich in carbohydrates.

60 Per Cent Carbohydrates

Carbohydrates should form at least 60 per cent of the supply of food fuel. Rarely are menus deficient in carbohydrates, because they are so widely distributed in such common foods as cereals, bread, potatoes, macaroni products, sweets, and sweet fruits and vegetables, such as oranges, grapes, apples and pears.

Fats should supply about 20 per cent of the caloric content of the diet. They are obtained from butter, margarine, cream, egg yolk, salad dressings, vegetable oils and the fat of meats.

For Tea and For Tennis

TWO of the most important things for midsummer are: a sleeveless dress of the most casual sort for sports and daytime, and a cool dress with cape or jacket, to wear on the street and for afternoons. The two here suggested represent the very best of these types. Make them yourself, in fabrics and colors of your own choosing, and rejoice in the knowledge that you have some very individual new clothes.

Sleeveless Sports Frock.

Even if you never take a tennis racket in your hand, you'll enjoy having this cool, classic dress for summer daytimes. In pique, linen, seersucker or gingham, it will look and feel so cool and fresh! Perfectly straight and plain, it has darts at the waistline to make it fit with becoming slowness. This is a diagram pattern—practically nothing to make! In just a few hours you'll have it all ready to button on at your shoulders.

Afternoon Cape Ensemble.

With or without the cape, this dress with lifted waistline to flatten the midriff, is a charming, slenderizing style. The cape is a darling—puffed high at the shoulders, and made with arm slits so that it won't be always slipping off your shoulders. Make this de-

Free Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance

PLANNING a balanced diet will cease to be a puzzle if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance, offered free, by C. Houston Goudiss.

It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet, and includes skeleton menus for breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper, to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification.

A postcard is sufficient to bring you this valuable aid to good menu planning. Just ask for the Nutrition Chart. Address C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th St., New York City

The Protective Foods

It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.

Desplaines M. E.
Camp Meeting
Opens despite flood

The Methodist Camp Meeting at DesPlaines will go on despite the recent flood stage of the DesPlaines river which flows along the Western boundary of the Camp Ground.

Methodists living on the camp ground early this week organized a committee, and besides clearing the mud out of their own cottages, went to work on the buildings and facilities used for religious meetings.

"We will not break the seventy-five year old tradition of DesPlaines" said Raymond G. Kimball, president of the camp ground association. The season at DesPlaines will open Sunday, July 10, with a sermon at 10:30 by senior bishop John M. Moore of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At 1:30 p. m. there will be a mass meeting of the Methodists of Chicago with an address by Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf, in charge of the communion here. Music will be sung by the choir of the St. James Church directed by Bethuel Gross.

Young people will meet for a rally at 6:45 p. m. with an address by the Rev. Ray E. Honeywell of Hemenway Church, Evanston. Bishop Moore will preach again at the evening service beginning at 7:45 o'clock. Special music will be given by the combined choirs of the Scandinavian Methodist churches of Chicago, directed by Gilbert Peterson.

Scandinavian Methodists, uniting for the first time, are conducting camp meetings all this week with Bishop Moore as their principal speaker. They will join in the Sunday celebrations.

Chicago To Have
Children's Theatre

At last Chicago is to have a real children's theatre of its own. For years most of the other cities—some of the smaller as well as the large ones—have had theatres which are entirely dedicated to the younger generation, but Chicago has lagged behind.

But now it is to have one, for the Jack and Jill Juvenile Theatre Guild is taking over the Chicago Civic Theatre this fall and will present young people's plays there every Saturday morning at 10:45. They will open the first week in November and will play for a six month season—until the first week in May.

This theatre is the smaller one in the Civic Opera Building on Wacker Drive. It is perfect for a youth center, because—in spite of the fact that it seats about nine hundred, it has all the intimacy and charm so necessary for the success of a children's theatre.

The productions will be under the direction of Marie Agnes Foley, who founded the Jack and Jill Players over twelve years ago. All of the roles in the plays will be taken by young people between the ages of 6 and 18.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"God" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 3.

The Golden Text was, "We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners" (Psalms 20: 5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Praise ye the Lord. Praise, O ye servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord. Blessed be the name of the Lord from this time forth and for evermore. The Lord is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens. Who is like unto the Lord our God, who dwelleth on high" (Psalms 113: 1, 2, 4, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Not materially, but spiritually we know Him as divine Mind, as Life, Truth, and Love. We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, waiting no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God. Religion will then be of the heart and not of the head" (p. 140).

News From Springfield

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, General Assembly
7th Senatorial District.

The adjournment sine die of the First and Second Special Sessions of the 60th General Assembly a respite from legislative duties to the 153 members of the House and the 51 members of the Senate. It also brought a respite from watching legislative procedure to harried business men, worried tax-payers, civic minded citizens, sit-down relievers, township supervisors, social workers, motor club officials and the regular attendants at all sessions who represent labor, industry, education, etc. The adjournment sent back to their respective jobs all of the state employees who spend a great deal of time on the floor of the House and Senate working in behalf of the legislation desired by the administration. So numerous are these employees at times that they have to be requested to leave the floor.

In summarizing the results of the Special Sessions so far as the above mentioned groups were affected, we may say:

1.—Business men were successful in securing the defeat of the Use Tax, the Producers Tax, the Cigarette Tax and the Licensing Tax on Businesses and Professions.

2.—The organized taxpayers gained by the defeat of the increased tax on real estate for the purpose of financing unemployment relief but partially lost in their efforts to defeat the housing bills which exempted from taxation federal housing projects. The bills which passed were, however, limited to one project in Chicago where the land had already been acquired.

3.—The civic minded citizens lost in their fight for the City Manager enabling legislation.

4.—The organized relief clients seemed fairly well satisfied with the total amount of $7,300,000 which they received in the two sessions, although it was far short of the $16,000,000 which they were demanding at one time.

5.—The Township supervisors were not pleased by the added power given to the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission wherein relief funds may be withheld when the Commission believes that funds are not being handled properly. In the fight over House Bill No. 67, the feud was renewed between the supervisors and the professional social workers.

6.—Motorists gained by the passage of the Drivers License and Financial Responsibility Bills, the only outstanding accomplishment of the Special Session, but the motoring public lost in their fight against the diversion to relief of $2,500,000 from the gasoline tax funds for Chicago.

7.—The High Schools of Illinois are pleased by the appropriation of $1,000,000 for those in distress and the University of Illinois was given $700,000 for a new building to take the place of one which was condemned and torn down.

All of the above observation are of course predicated on the assumption that the Governor signs all of the bills which were passed or that they will become laws without his veto.

The bitterness of feeling because of factional difference which characterized the entire session came to a climax on Wednesday when the Majority Floorleader Benjamin Adamowski bitterly assailed the Senate and the Minority members of the House for their efforts in defeating the legislation proposed in the Governor's program and particularly those measures which would have produced more revenue for the State Treasury. The attack was answered in the House of Representatives by Senators Rennie and Schnackenberg, Republicans in the House and by Senators Monroe, Maypole, Karraker and Lieutenant Governor Stelle in the Senate. The consensus of opinion in both parties was that Mr. Adamowski had not helped himself nor the Administration which he represented in the attack.

I am sure that I speak for every member of the legislature in the hope that there will be no more special sessions this year and in that hope I should be seconded by the taxpayers of Illinois.

Bugle Calls

By Zeb Potter

Our sympathy is extended to the Scheer and the Brockman families in their recent sorrow: the passing of Valantine Scheer and Carl Brockman.

To Ruth Geuther now Mrs. Ralph Cutler congratulations and best wishes for a happy wedded life.

Our best wishes are also extended to Jeanette Wallace who married John Jahnke of Beverly Hills.

Frankfort is considering obtaining Federal aid in erecting a new town hall. Now is the time for all cities and villages to step out and claim some of this help from Washington. The Federal government is faced with the problem of putting men to work and the communities need the improvements.

At Tinley Park plans for a sewer system and sewage treatment plant are being discussed by the citizens. These sewage treatment plants are a vital necessity to stop pollution of creeks and streams.

We see that the Blue Island Bar Association has honored Mayor Francis Harper of Tinley Park by appointing head of the organization. Fine, Mr. Harper deserves this recognition. We need more men like him in public service.

At Frankfort, Mrs. Katie Fink has received her re-appointment as postmistress of the village. This, indeed, is recognition at Washington of the conscientious and faithful performance of duty by Mrs. Fink. To you, Mrs. Fink, we trust you will be able to serve Frankfort citizens for many more years.

When in Mokena, folks, just drop into the News-Bulletin office and pay us a visit. You will find that we are human. That we are trying to serve you with a good community paper. That we can make mistakes, that we never try to be mean or vicious in our dealings with our fellow men. Of course some will differ with us about our views concerning public problems, but remember folks, we don't know it all. What little progress would there be made in this world if everyone was of the same mind?

As we print this weekly newspaper year after year, we come to the conclusion that there is always two sides to everything, two sides to a bargain, that the other fellow has got to live. As we get older and pass along the highway to the evening of life we find that in being tolerant, in trying to get along with our fellow man, in pursuing a policy of live and let live, we can in a small measure achieve some worthwhile goal of service to others.

In Denver some years ago a man organized a club to help prevent suicides. As a result of ill health this man recently ended his own life. This is, indeed, ironic tragedy.

Young McCormick, son of wealthy parents, lost his life in mountain climbing in the southwest. Wealthy people with everything provided for them, lack the zest for the struggle for existence that poor people must face each day. As a result of boredom they create adventures and experiences for themselves in which there is the element of danger. Our sympathy is extended to his mother formerly Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, a very able and democratic woman.

RECIPE

Last week you will remember we sent out a all for recipes. Since no one responded with recipes, we shall print one in the column. Credit for this recipe goes to Mary Meade, cooking editor of the Chicago Tribune. CREAM OF CARROT SOUP — 1/2 medium sized onion, one table spoon of butter, one-fourth cup of fine bread crumbs, one and one-half cups of water, one-half teaspoon sugar, one cup strained carrots, one bouillon cube, one cup of milk.

Cook the chopped onion slowly in the butter five minutes without browning. Add the crumbs, water, salt and sugar and simmer 20 minutes. Add the carrots, bouillon cubes and milk. Heat and serve at once. Try this recipe folks and write us letting us know how much luck you had with it.

Margaret Haley, county welfare worker, with offices in the Young building in Joliet, is in need of used clothing and mattresses to supply needy people. If you have a mattress you don't need will you get in touch with Miss Haley? She will see that the proper and deserving people will receive it.

Doctors are now finding out that heredity is an important factor in baldness. If your head is like a billiard ball then don't blame it on worry or poor luck at the game of poker.

What do you think of these names for towns? Slick, Okla.; Pie, W.Va.; and Gay, Mich.

A long life may not be good enough, but a good life is long enough.—Benjamin Franklin, Poor Richard's Almanac.

In Germany today the people are warned against throwing away empty tooth paste tubes. Everything, it seems, is saved.

People who have mental ills and who go to doctors who specialize in this field are quite often surprised when questioned about their childhood. These medical men claim that quite a bit of our troubles of the mind date back to the "kid" days when we couldn't have our own way about everything. Maybe after all there is something in the old adage "spare the rod and spoil the man."

Evangelical Synods Unite

With but six dissenting votes the General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in session here has adopted a constitution to become effective at the next General Synod in two years.

With this action the union of the Evangelical Synod of North America and the Reformed Church in the U. S. erected four years ago and carried on under a temporary plan of union, is consummated.

A new hymnal and a Book of Worship are still to be passed upon at the sessions here.

Under the new constitution the full-time offices of President, Secretary, and Treasurer, are created. They will eventually be elected for six years and will be eligible to reelection. Their salaries are to be fixed by the General Synod. The offices of first and second vice-presidents are created and the latter is to be a layman. Under resolutions adopted however these officers are to be elected by this Synod for two years until the next General Synod.

A General Council is set up to supervise and direct the work of the Church and act for the Church when the General Synod is not in session, except in such matters as are reserved in the constitution and by-laws.

The doctrine of the Church is briefly stated in the following statement:

"The Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testament are recognized as the Word of God and the ultimate rule of Christian faith and practice."

"The doctrinal standards of the Evangelical and Reformed Church are the Heidelberg Catechism, Luther's catechism and the Augsburg Confession. They are accepted as an authoritative interpretation of the essential truth taught in the Holy Scriptures."

"Whenever these doctrinal standards differ, ministers, members and congregations, in accordance with the liberty of conscience inherent in the Gospel, are allowed to adhere to the interpretation of one of these confessions. However, in each case the final Norm is the Word of God."

"In its relation to other Christian communions the Evangelical and Reformed Church shall constantly endeavor to promote the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

"Congregations shall be allowed freedom of worship. The forms and order of worship that are set forth in the Book of Worship and in the hymnal approved by the General Synod shall be followed as the accepted Norms."

"The Lord's Day and the festivals and seasons of the Church year shall be observed with appropriate services in the House of God."

"The sacraments of the Church, instituted by Christ, are Holy Baptism and the Lord's Supper."

"The rites of the Church are Confirmation, ordination, consecration."

"The new Constitution provides for the following offices: ministers, teachers of theology, commissioned workers, elders, deacons. The judicatory are the consistory or church council, made up of elders and deacons; the spiritual council consisting of the pastor or pastors and elders, the Synod made up of all the ministers and one delegate from every charge within a designated territory and the General Synod as the supreme judiciary."

Administrative Boards as now constituted are to continue as heretofore, until they are merged in accordance with the provisions of the Plan of Union.

PALOS PARK

Literary Discussion group met at the Palos Park WPA Public library last Wednesday, the subject being the discussion of any favorite poet. There were nine members present.

The next Literary Discussion meeting will be the fourth Wednesday in July at the library which is now in the Sunday School room of the Palos Park Community church.

Children's story hour will be Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. at the library.

A group of WPA workers are busy tearing down the old Community House and will soon be ready to build a new Community House which will be very beneficial to the village. Palos Park has been in need of a building of this sort for a long time.

A doctors golf association held their annual all day outing at the Palos Oak Hills golf club on June 29. About 80 members played in the tournament. Dinner was served at 6:30 p.m. after which prizes were distributed. Each member that played in the tournament received an eversharp as a souvenir of the tournament.

The Daily Vacation Bible school of the Palos Park Community church will start on July 5. All children are invited to attend.

Palos Park Civic League met at the Prairie Club on July 6 at 8 p.m. There was an election of officers at this meeting. The guest speakers were Mr. Pierce and W. Jones who spoke on "Authority on Race Restrictions."

A few of the Palos Park people attended the Donkey Baseball game at the Orland Park ball field on June 29. The game being between Orland Park and Lemont with a score of 2 to 1 in favor of Orland.

The batter hits the ball, mounts the donkey (if he can) and has intentions of getting to first base, if, the well known donkeys such as "Popeye" and "Mae West" decide to go there. The famous donkeys would much rather perform a circus than circle the bases. It may take a few seconds before the batter mounts the donkey as there are plenty of thrills and spills included in the game. It may also take the fielders of the opposing team a few seconds before they get the ball after the batter hits it into the field as the in and outfielders are both mounted on donkeys. The catcher and pitcher play on their own feet but are not permitted to field batted balls.

A donkey baseball game is one of the hardest, funniest and most laughable sport that has ever been originated as it is better than a rodeo and funnier than a circus.

Auto Races At Fair Grounds

Speedway Sunday

Practically all the great "name" drivers of America will go to the post at the Fair Grounds Speedway Sunday afternoon, July 10, when Carl Stockholm will resume his series of standard motor car races.

Already the entry list includes the names of Jimmy Snyder, Chet Gardner, Frank Wearne, Billy Devore, George Connors, Ted Horn, Frank Brisko and many others who have ridden to fame and fortune over the bricks of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and there is a chance that Stockholm will be able to match Floyd Roberts, pilot of the winning car in the Hoosier classic last Memorial Day for a match race with Snyder as a part of the program.

The entire chart of eight events will be under the sanction and direction of the contest board of the American Automobile Association. Ted Doeschler, recently appointed zone supervisor for the Chicago district, will be in direct charge of the racing.

Among the famous pilots who have been invited to enter the card are Milbur Shaw, Rex Mays, George Connor, Louis Tomei, Tony Willman Duke Nalon, Mauri Rose, and all of the greats of the dirt track racing game. Nalon is the holder of the track record at the Fair Grounds for one lap, while Snyder holds the 50-lap derby distance.

Work on the track is going along rapidly and in spite of the heavy weather of the last three weeks, the rains have actually helped in the conditioning process by beating the oil far down into the ground to a point where it would not have penetrated otherwise.

The last race staged at the Fair Grounds early in June not only brought out the finest attendance and the cream of the racing talent, but was the best race meet since Stockholm began staging these A.A.A. events four years ago at the old Roby track. The splendid crowd indicated that motor racing in standard cars is rapidly taking its place as a major sport in Chicago and Stockholm confidently predicts 15,000 will see the Sunday program.

Peter Wannemacher who has been quite ill remains about the same.

Some of Tinley's folks motored to Bass lake Sunday. Owing to the hot weather, swimming was in order and a variety of suits were used.

Our much in demand carpenter had quite a time being in a very wholly state, but with the aid of horse blanket pins, and baby safety pins, and ladies under-garment pins he finally got into the water, but had to wait until dark before he could get out.

His friends are going to chip together to see that he gets a whole suit. Maybe he won't be so stuck up

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park Child Welfare Clinic which has been in operation for the past ten years is in danger of being discontinued according to a notice received from the Rural Public Health Nursing Service of Cook County. A meeting of the Clinic was scheduled to be held in the Orland Park public school July 13th but according to the notice the Orland Park Welfare has been temporarily cancelled.

The annual Fourth of July picnic and chicken dinner sponsored by the St. Michael church in the Forest Preserve on 143rd street was well attended.

J. F. Schmaderke, local International Harvester Co. agent advises that a combine demonstration is to be held in a forty acre rye field at 191st and Crawford in the near future. Watch for date of demonstration. The combine is now on exhibition at Mr. Schmaderke's store grounds.

The weekly movies shown here on Saturday nights continues to draw big crowds. Similar shows by the same company are now being shown Wednesday nights at Mokena.

The Adult Bible class of the Orland M. E. church will not have any meetings or social affairs during the months of July and August. Activities will be resumed again in Sept.

The S. S. Knox family enjoyed a basket picnic given by the Perseverance Lodge of the Masonic Order at Schiller Park the Fourth of July. Traces of the recent Desplaines river flood were still visible.

Mrs. H. P. Rogers of Carlisle, Indiana has been visiting for a few days with her sister, Mrs. A. Watt.

The Orland M. E. Guild held an all day meeting with Mrs. David Agate last Thursday. A pot luck dinner was served. A quilt was sewed.

The village board meets in semi-monthly session next Monday night. Mrs. J. F. Schmaderke is able to be up and around after being confined to bed for the past four weeks.

Toby Wing Coming To Rialto In Joliet

Toby Wing, the star of movies, vaudeville and musical comedy who will appear at the Rialto Theatre Sunday, July 10, one day only as the star of her own show "Movieland Revels of 1938" sings songs which sends audiences out of the theatre chuckling, humming and trying to remember the outstanding lines to tell their friends about.

Toby's songs all are original, or are her own parodies on songs of the day.

Included in the show with Toby are acts which she personally selected. Her biggest triumph she thinks is getting the signature of Al Bernie who although 18 years old, is considered one of the coming stars of the year, having been signed for two weeks at the famous Chez Paree in Chicago and remaining there twelve weeks. The twelve aristocrats sensational dancing team of six boys and six girls, have headlined to spend the week end at the Indiana Dunes.

Raymond Glahn is visiting relatives in Stapleton, Nebraska.

ORLAND 7 — BATAVIA O

Orland 7, Batavia O. Things went right on booming for the Orland club the Fourth, when they defeated a team from Batavia, Ill., by the score of 7 to 0.

"Buck" Nicolai pitched for Orland and set the visitors down to one single which came in the 5th with no outs but "Buck" settled down and retired the side in order.

Alvin Uthe pitched for the loser and although allowing 9 hits, pitched a great game.

"Buck" Nicolai also contributed to the hitting of the team when he got three for three to lead to attack.

Ludwig had two for three. Ed. Ryan hit a long home run down the left field line for the longest base hit of the day. "Buck" struck out nine men and only walked one man.

Next Sunday Orland will play Evergreen Park at Orland. Game time 2:30 p. m.

Let Pictures Tell the Story

BELIEVING that pictures are a revealing important events or providing a glimpse of people who are playing a leading part in today's affairs are an essential part of the modern newspaper, we print in every issue a select group covering incidents and scenes of national interest. These pictures are selected from thousands that are snapped every day by news photographers in every corner of the globe. Turn to them and the scenes will LIVE in theatre cafes all over the world, are a special feature of "Movieland Revels". Others in the show are Fritz and Jean Herbert, comedy pantomime artists; Jack Gwynne, outstanding magician and card manipulator and Joseph Griffin, Irish-American tenor who just returned from a two year engagement in Europe.

"Gold Diggers in Paris" the sixth of the famous musical comedy series is the screen attraction booked with this stage show. Rudy Vallee, crooning maestro of the airwaves, heads the cast and golden voiced Rosemary and is featured opposite him with Gloria Dickson doing a feminine menace. The Schnickelfritz Band, a specialty outfit that is taking the country by storm with their goofy antics, take care of the rhythm with Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins. Melville Cooper and Mabel Todd in charge of comedy.

U. S. FAMILY

NEW YORK—"Unity," the sculpture by Harry Poole Camden, of Parkersburg, West Virginia, which won for him the $10,000 prize in the contest for sculpture to embellish the United States Government Building at the New York World's Fair 1939. The group represents a typical American family being sheltered by the symbol of "Unity." There were 430 contestants in the competition, which was held in the Fair's Hall of Communications.

Flight of Migrating Birds

Evidence adduced by the United States Biological survey shows that the greater part of migration takes place below 3,000 feet above the earth's surface, much of it below 1,000 feet, and that birds prefer to fly below the level of the clouds.

FAIR GLAMOUR

We certainly do hear a lot these days about the New York World's Fair 1939. We keep right on hearing it, too, day after day. It seems you can't pick up a newspaper anywhere, or a magazine, either, that you don't run across something about the tremendous, stupendous, glamorous gorgeousness of the Fair, or words to that effect.

Sometimes we lean back in our worn editorial chair and wonder whether the fellow who's sending out all this press literature about the exposition isn't kidding us just a little. New York, you know, likes to kid the country-folk now and then. However, it doesn't seem there are any grains of salt sent with the press news of the Fair, so perhaps we're supposed to take it as is and believe it.

Let's see, now, what some of the wonders are going to be, as they are told to us in all sorts of flowery language. If you want to stick your tongue in your cheek afterward, that's up to you. We're just sitting still till it's time to journey to the Fair and see for ourselves.

To begin with, we're told that the Fair has built a steel globe 200 feet high, the biggest thing of its kind ever put up, and that there's a steel spire 700 feet tall right next to it, and that you are going to travel from the spire into the inside of the globe on the biggest escalator in the world, and that it took a camera man more than half an hour to climb up into the spire to take some pictures of the scenery thereabouts. Well, mebbe, mebbe.

And now try some of these on your imagination:

A statue of George Washington 65 feet tall, the largest portrait in sculpture in the world; a sun dial 50 feet high that's really going to tell time whenever the sun shines; the process, which all visitors will be able to witness, of milking 200 contented cows on a revolving platform so that they'll give 4,000 quarts of milk every 24 hours; the opportunity to make a parachute drop of 250 feet and live to tell the folks back home about it; the presentation of the entire history of railroading in this country, with all the dramatics of hold-ups with big six-shooters, and the like, on real tracks with real trains and masked bandits; a gigantic fountain display at night combining fire, water, sound and color as never before in what has been called "the nearest approach to chaos that man can contrive for purposes of entertainment"; the sight of a great airplane apparently in flight, so that you'll feel like ducking when you see it as if it were coming toward you; the changing of the leaves of a thousand trees to fairy-like fluorescence by the light of hidden mercury vapor lamps; the display of a "rocket ship" of the future in which those who want to "get away from it all" may be shot through the stratosphere to Mars, or to wherever else in the distant universe they have been foolish enough to buy tickets; a wide amphitheatre, as large as those of ancient Rome, where thousands will gather to witness thrilling pageants and spectacular productions of rainbow hues on a huge island stage; an enormous model of the City of New York, with some of its skyscrapers shown twenty-five feet tall, to display the intricate lighting system of the metropolis.

These are only a few of the promised wonders. Is the Fair trying to kid us? What do you think?

UP THE LADDER TO FAME

NEW YORK—It took Ross McKee of the New York Daily News 35 minutes to climb to the top of the 700 foot Trylon on the grounds of the New York World's Fair 1939. Once up he squeezed out on a 14-inch ledge and took panoramic pictures of the Fair grounds and snapshots of the giant 200 foot Perisphere, the framework for which is nearing completion.

McKee was the first cameraman to accomplish this feat. He followed in the footsteps of steel "birdmen" who had just planted the U. S. flag, marking the finish of the steel frame of the Trylon.

These two structures will be covered with stucco and, as the Theme Center of the Fair, will set the pace for the $150,000,000 Exposition.

After 20 years ...

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Exactly 20 years ago little Czechoslovakia emerged from ruins of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Today, on her birthday anniversary, is she being swallowed by Germany? Since Hitler's Austrian coup more than half the Czech frontier teems with Nazi activity. Along this frontier live Sudeten Germans, pro-Nazi, who seek autonomy and eventual annexation by Germany. The Sudetens have just grievances because their trade was stifled when they were joined to Czechoslovakia by the treaty of St. Germaine in 1919. But they are making mountains of molehills.

1 President of Czechoslovakia is Eduard Benes (shown with his wife), one of Europe's smartest little statesmen. To pacify Sudetens he has made many concessions, seeking meanwhile to maintain the principles of Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, father of the Czech republic. But when he closed the German border during a recent election, two Sudetens were killed and the Nazis made much of it.

2 No heroes ever received more elaborate funerals than the two Sudeten "victims," who could have saved their lives by obeying regulations. The world was made to watch the burial service, a much-publicized event admittedly designed to inflame Sudetens against the Czech government. Meanwhile President Benes kept his fingers crossed during a period of European high tension unequaled since World war days. At last both Czechs and Germans withdrew border reinforcements.

3 Leading the Sudetens and other Czech Nazis is Konrad Henlein, close friend of Adolf Hitler. Of the nation's 15,000,000 people, probably one-fourth answer his beck and call.

4 Although Czechoslovakia's frontier is mountainous (the treaty-makers intended it that way) she is rushing a first line of defense against Germany. This special trench is one of many in a series of fortifications comparable only to France's famous Maginot line.

5 Czechoslovakia's peace-time army is 180,000 strong, with 1,000,000 trained reserves. Military preparation is now being emphasized; there is good reason.

FOTO-FEATURE

6 All Europe envies Czechoslovakia's famous munition industry, long an important business in the Sudeten area. This strategic weakness is being overcome by construction of a new armaments center at Bystrice, in Slovakia, far from the German border. The Czech army is perhaps the best armed small force in Europe, strong in artillery, anti-aircraft, tanks and machine guns. But it is no match for Germany's military machine, one of the world's strongest.

7 Thus in 1938, as she celebrates 20 years of peaceful progress, little Czechoslovakia points bristling weapons at the world, hoping that she need never use them but certainly not afraid to fight. To France and Russia she looks for assistance in the event of invasion, but the Czechs are hemmed in by none-too-friendly neighbors who may cut off her allies. Moreover, who can depend on allies in the year 1938? President Benes would like to know.

Curse of Progress

PIE-A-POT and Long Lodge, Cree chieftains, audacious warriors and veterans of many a scrap with other tribes, ruled their villages with an iron hand. They were happy, prosperous and had very little trouble. Shortly after the coming of the "red coated pony soldiers of the Great White Mother," the Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge tribes of Crees had been given a splendid reservation with timber and game and fish in abundance. There they had settled down peacefully.

And then one day, to the astonishment of all concerned, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge ordered their tribesmen to pull stakes, for the two tribes were going for a ramble across the country without having any particular destination in view. The handful of white settlers became a bit alarmed, but their alarm subsided when they observed the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were orderly.

In time the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges came across a large party of white men digging up the ground and also laying thin strips of iron or steel across the flat prairie. "What is all this?" inquired the majestic Pie-a-Pot. "Oh . . . just building a railroad," replied one of the workmen. The Crees moved on into the west and when they were about a mile or so past the end of steel the two chiefs ordered the tribes to pitch camp.

Slowly but surely the end of steel crept closer and closer toward the Cree encampment and it was later discovered that the camp was situated on the right of way of the railroad. As the end of steel moved closer and closer, engineers and foremen parleyed with Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge, entreating them to move either to the right or left, off the right of way, so that the work could go on without unnecessary delays. The chiefs stood firm, and in time refused to parley further with the engineers in charge.

Then, one fine morning Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were visited by two red-coated horsemen, a sergeant and constable of the Northwest Mounted Police. The argument was soon going again, and matters reached such a stage that the sergeant informed them that they had better move or he would do the moving for them. Pie-a-Pot let out a ninety horse-power howl, and soon the sergeant and constable were surrounded by hundreds of howling, painted Crees out for blood and scalps and the complete destruction of the white invaders. During a lull in the melee, the sergeant took out his watch and told Pie-a-Pot that he would give him exactly 15 minutes to move off that railroad right-of-way. Instantly there was another demonstration of anger and truculence, and the two Men of the Mounted sat their saddles as best they could in the milling mob. As the last tick of the fifteenth minute passed into eternity, the sergeant of the Northwest Mounted Police dismounted right into the midst of that bloodthirsty mob. He forced his way through it and walked right over to Pie-a-Pot's teepee and kicked the keyhole down. While squaws and children howled and screamed under the collapsed teepee, the sergeant walked to the next teepee and kicked the keyhole of that one down. From one to the other that lone sergeant strode, kicking keyholes down until every teepee was flat. Young bucks and so-called "braves" followed close on his heels, pushing against him, making faces at him, cursing him, and doing all they could to annoy or frighten him, but the sergeant just kept right on going until all teepees were flat, and in spite of their proximity, not one Cree had dared to strike a blow at the courageous sergeant. With everything flattened, the sergeant mounted his horse and gave his last order.

"Orlright . . . bustle abaht a bit . . . On the move . . . shove off abaht your blurry business, wotever it is," all of which was his cockney way of saying "Git goin'." Meanwhile, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were so angry they were stumped for words. Never had they seen such audacity. One lone man, wearing a red coat, had literally wrecked their village. It is highly probable, moreover, that Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge realized that if the other men of the Mounted were anything like this sergeant, perhaps the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges had better not get into any more arguments with them. These red coats were bad medicine. At any rate, as the chieftains saw the hopelessness of further resistance, they muttered a few words to nearby tribesmen, and within two hours the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were heading for their reservation. En route Pie-a-Pot chanced to remember that if he didn't behave himself the Great White Mother would stop sending supplies of food and flour and clothing and that little bit of treaty money now and then. "Oh well, what a day it's been, anyway," he might have said, as he arrived at the reservation.

Just Another Day in New York

All floats in this parade were on wheels. The procession ended in the Fair grounds where half a million people were assembled.

Fun was a part of the Tinley Legion carnival June 19.

Jacob Detwiler
Tinley Blacksmith
43 Years, Dies

Death came to Jacob Detwiler, aged 81 years, Tinley Park village blacksmith for 43 years, in the early hours of last Sunday morning at his home, after a lingering illness with asthma and heart trouble.

He was born in Switzerland on October 4, 1856. He came to America in 1884 as a journeyman blacksmith and worked for seven years for Fred Nielsen. After operating a blacksmith shop in the old Giesel Building, he bought out the business of Mr. Nielsen and remained in business until 1933 when he retired. He removed his shop and converted the old building into two stores. He continued to do odd jobs until June 1937.

In 1904 he was united in marriage with Lena Praeloch. To this union two sons were born, one son dying in infancy in 1914.

Surviving are the widow, Lena Detwiler, one son Rudolph of Homewood, one grand daughter and one sister, who lives in Switzerland. The grand daughter, Marylan Ann was born June 4th but was never seen by the deceased.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Hirsch Funeral Chapel to the Zion Lutheran church of which the departed was a charter member. Rev. Albert Budenhagen officiated. Burial was in the Zion Lutheran cemetery.

Mr. Detwiler made a large circle of friends during his long residence in Tinley Park and was well known throughout this region. He attained the age of 81 years and nine months.

Mokena M. Y. O.
Defeated Homer
Sunday 9 to 8

Mokena M. Y. O. ball team take possession of second place in the midwest junior league standing last Sunday by eking out a victory over the Homer A. C. club. The team is one half game out of first place while the M. L. O. have won two games and lost one. Again the Mokena sluggers were in stride as they pounded out long drives that should have gone for triples and homers but for the ruling of a nearby fence they only counted as doubles. "Curt" Hellmuth, "Man" Cappel, "Eric" Munson, and "Allie" Lauffer featured the M.Y.O. attack. Tierney pitched great ball for six innings until he blew up after he had committed two errors and then the rest of the team followed suit. Cappel relieved Tierney at the start of the seventh and pitched steady ball as Mokena earned a hard fought victory.

Dolton beat Tinley Park last Sunday by the score of 13 to 11 and retained their lead in the league standing. Tinley Park beat Homer A. C. last Monday, the 4th by the score of 8 to 7. So the standing in the league is as follows:
Dolton Won 2—Lost 0
Mokena Won 2—Lost 1
Tinley Park Won 1—Lost 2
Homer A. C. Won 0—Lost 2
Sunday, Mokena M. Y. O. plays Tinley Park at Heyden's field. So come out and root for our team as we are after first place.
